My dear Prasidh-San:

I wanted to write you already several days ago, but I could not find any time to do it is I ~~am~~ have been very, very busy during all the week. Now, as Mr. Takarai kindly agrees to take this letter to your house, I am using this opportunity.

A good friend of mine, Prof. Rosenstand, who is a very fine Danish pianist, ~~would~~ like to meet you, and I promised him that I would ask you to come to my house on Monday (tomorrow) evening. So, please, if you have no other engagement yet, I shall be very glad to see you at my apartment tomorrow night, at about 8:30 o'clock. I also asked a Siamese friend of yours, whose name, however, I do not remember exactly at this moment, ^{and he} is also going to come.

At ^a my rate, I should be very thankful if you could kindly telephone me, either tonight before 7:30 o'clock, ~~or~~ ~~at~~ tomorrow morning, till 11:30 o'clock, at my apartment (Ushigome 6894) and tell me whether you will come or not.

Looking forward to seeing you,
Yours cordially,
